

Dublin holds Car Boot Sale

JARRAD DELANEY

Dublin History Group invited people to sell their second hand wares, and the wider community to get together at its annual Car Boot Sale at the Dublin Institute on Sunday.

The group holds the event each year and invites the community to set up stalls outside the institute and sell second hand and other goods in a relaxed, casual atmosphere.

The institute's doors were also open on the day with people invited to come inside and chat with history group members over a cup of tea or coffee and cakes.

This is a very community-orientated event which provides a chance for locals to catch up with each other, while also providing people with second hand options for shopping ahead of Christmas.

TOP: Debra Hawkins from Parham and Margaret Jenkin from Long Plains with their stall, raising money to put back into the Long Plains community, including the local Red Cross chapter.

PHOTOS: JARRAD DELANEY 375883_01

LEFT:
Peter Hull
from Port Wakefield with his stall, selling assorted
bric-a-brac.
375883_02